PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT

EDWARD L. DUBROFF, Counsel to the firm of BARST & MUKAMAL, on behalf of Petitioners, prays that a writ of certiorari, issue to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit entered in the above case on June 28, 1978.

Opinions Below

The opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals is not officially reported but is dated August 31, 1976 and included in the Appendix on page 2.

The judgment order of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, without formal written opinion, is unreported.

Jurisdiction

The judgment order of the Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit was entered on June 28, 1978, and a copy thereof is appended to this petition in the Appendix at p. 1. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

Questions Presented

Petitioners applied for relief from deportation under 8 U.S.C. 1251(f) (Section 241(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended) on a motion to reopen to the Board of Immigration Appeals. Although an evidentiary hearing was not had on the issue of Petitioners' eligibility for the relief sought, the Board of Immigration Appeals nevertheless denied Petitioners' motion. In so doing the Board reached a legal conclusion contrary to established legal precedent.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit affirmed the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals without rendering an opinion. The questions presented are:

1. Whether the term "otherwise admissible" as contained in 8 U.S.C. 1251(f) has been interpreted by the Board of Immigration Appeals and the Court below in a manner contrary to its meaning and intent.
2. Whether the Board of Immigration Appeals erred in denying Petitioners an evidentiary hearing on the threshold issue of their eligibility for relief under 8 U.S.C. 1251(f).

3. Whether the Court below, in affirming the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals apparently disregarded, without reason, their prior decision in Persaud v. INS, 537 F.2d 776 (3rd Cir. 1976).

Statutes, Federal Rules and Regulations Involved

The pertinent portions of the Immigration and Nationality Act:

1. 8 U.S.C. 1251(f)
2. 8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(1)
3. 8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(2)
4. 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14)
5. 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(19)
6. 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(20)
7. Section 7 of the Act of 1957
(P.L. 85-316, 71 Stat. 639)

The foregoing are set forth in the Appendix at pages 5-8.

Statement

On November 25, 1974 an Order to Show Cause was issued by the Respondent against the female petitioner alleging that she had entered the United States at Honolulu, Hawaii, on or about August 26, 1973, at which time she was admitted for permanent residence as an immediate relative under the provisions of Section 201(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act; that she did not present evidence of the termination of her prior marriage to Clemente David; that the evidence presented of her marriage to Alfred K. Donnelly had been determined to be fraudulent; that Alfred K. Donnelly, as described in petition and ancillary documents, had been determined to be non-existent; that, therefore, at the time of her entry she was not in possession of a valid, unexpired immigrant visa, border crossing identification card or reentry permit; and that she was not exempt from presentation thereof.

Petitioner was, therefore, charged in said Order to Show Cause with being subject to deportation pursuant to 8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(1) in that, at the time of entry she was excludable under 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(20), as an alien who was an immigrant not in possession of a valid unexpired immigrant visa, reentry permit, border crossing identification card, or other valid entry document, and not exempted from the possession thereof by said act or regulations made thereunder.

The within petitioners are wife and husband, respectively, and the husband's relief is contingent upon such benefits as may accrue to his wife.

A deportation proceeding against both petitioners was commenced on December 19, 1974 before an Immigration Judge in Newark, New Jersey, and was concluded on the same day.

Immediately upon the conclusion of that hearing the Immigration Judge rendered his decision, whereby he found each of the petitioners to be deportable on the charges in the respective Orders to Show Cause, granted their applications to be permitted to voluntarily depart from the United States without expense to the Government in lieu of an order of deportation, directed that they so depart by April 19, 1975, and ordered that each be deported from the United States to the Philippines if there was a failure to so depart. The petitioners did not effectuate voluntary departure.

On September 21, 1976, petitioners' attorneys made a motion for a reopening of deportation proceedings in order to allow the female petitioner to make an application for a termination of said proceedings pursuant to 8 U.S.C. 1251(f).

On September 29, 1977, the Board of Immigration Appeals denied the motion for a reopening of deportation proceedings which would have allowed the female petitioner to present evidence of eligibility for relief under 8 U.S.C. 1251(f).

A petition for review was filed by petitioners in the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit on October 14, 1977.

The Court denied this petition on June 28, 1978 in a judgment order affirming the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals.

Petitioners, having never been permitted a full and formal hearing on their request for relief under 8 U.S.C. 1251(f) remain under a final order for deportation which is to be effectuated on July 31, 1978.

Reasons for Granting the Writ

The decision below should be reviewed because its erroneous interpretation of the terms "otherwise admissible" contained in 8 U.S.C. 1251(f) emasculates the clear meaning of this statute and is contrary to the intent of Congress.

Further, the decision below is in conflict with the decisions of this Court in INS v. Errico and Scott v. INS, 385 U.S. 214 (1966) or, if it is not in conflict, presents issues of far-reaching importance in the context of applications for relief under 8 U.S.C. 1251(f). These issues, apparently unclear and/or undecided, must eventually be faced. In either event, this Court should grant review.

The terms of 8 U.S.C. 1251(f) provide that where an alien is excludable at time of entry on account of an act of fraud or misrepresentation in procuring an immigrant visa, such alien is forgiven the fraud if the individual is the spouse, parent or child of a U. S. citizen and "otherwise admissible at the time of entry."

The term "otherwise admissible" has been defined by the Fifth Circuit to mean "... that an alien need only the physical, mental and moral standards for admission to this country set out in 8 U.S.C. 1182", Gonzalez de Moreno v. INS, 492 F.2d 532 (5th Cir. 1974). Similarly, Gonzalez v. INS, 493 F.2d 461 (5th Cir. 1974); Castro-Guerrero v. INS, 503 F.2d 964 (5th Cir. 1974); Ruiz-Salazar v. INS, 505 F.2d 118 (5th Cir. 1974). Such standards do not encompass the labor certification provisions of 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14).

The Third Circuit has held in Persaud v. INS, 537 F.2d 776 (3d Cir. 1976) that the Immigration Service cannot pick and choose the exclusion sections of 8 U.S.C. 1182 with which they will charge the alien in deportation proceedings, in order to thereby avoid the manifest purpose of 8 U.S.C. 1251(f). Nevertheless, the Board of Immigration Appeals, on its own initiative, has introduced an element never before present nor charged in the prior deportation proceeding. The Board concluded that the petitioner herein must show herself to be exempt from an alien employment certification, pursuant to 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14), to be found "otherwise admissible".

By so doing, the Board of Immigration Appeals, and the Third Circuit by its silent affirmance of the Board's opinion, have concluded that 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14) is an independent ground of exclusion entirely unrelated to the fraud committed by the petitioner.

There is no question that a fraud was committed by the petitioner in procuring an immigrant visa. However, in a manner straining all logic, the Board seeks to separate the 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14) exclusionary grounds from the fraud itself. The false premise contained in this proposition can best be illustrated with reference to the notion of "a lesser included offense." This notion was present in the Third Circuit's decision in Persaud v. INS, supra, wherein the Circuit Court found that the Immigration Service's attempt to separate 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(19) and 212(a)(20) to be a "wooden application of Reid's dicta (which) would permit the INS to freely avoid the implication of Section 241(f)." Persaud, supra, at p. 779.

It therefore appears that the Third Circuit in the instant case has without explanation failed to follow its own decision in Persaud, supra, and is in conflict with the Fifth Circuit's decision in Gonzalez de Moreno, supra. This split of the Courts is a further reason for granting review in the instant case, wherein, once again, the Immigration Service, by a highly technical and improper reading of 8 U.S.C. 1251(f), improperly seeks to rewrite a law of the United States, and thereby exceeds its authority.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, it is respectfully submitted that this petition for a writ of certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,

IN DEPORTATION PROCEEDINGS

MOTION

ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENTS: Barst & Mukamal, Esqs.
127 John Street
New York, NY
10038

CHARGE:

Order: Section 241(a)(1), I&N Act (8 U.S.C. 1251
(a)(1))—Excludable at time of entry —not in possession of valid unexpired immigrant visa (female respondent)Section 241(a)(2), I&N Act (8 U.S.C. 1251 (a)(2))—Nonimmigrant visitor—remained longer than permitted (male respondent)APPLICATION: Motion to reopen in order to apply for relief under section 241(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act

The respondents have submitted a motion to reopen their deportation proceeding so that they may apply for relief under section 241(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act. The motion will be denied.

The respondents are husband and wife, natives and citizens of the Philippines. The male respondent entered the United States as a nonimmigrant visitor on February 6, 1971. He was authorized to remain for one month, but remained thereafter without permission. He was found deportable as an overstayed visitor under the provisions of section 241(a)(2) of the Act, but granted the privilege of departing voluntarily in lieu of being deported. He makes no application for section 241(f) relief. It is merely alleged that if his wife is granted relief under that provision, she could then file a second preference visa petition in his behalf.

The female respondent entered the United States as an immigrant on August 26, 1973. She obtained immigrant status on the basis of a fraudulent marriage to one Alfred K. Donnelly, a fictitious person. She was found deportable under section 241(a)(1) of the Act, in that, at the time of entry she was within one or more classes of aliens excludable by the law, to wit, aliens who are immigrants not in possession of a valid immigrant visa or other valid entry document. Thus, her excludability at the time of entry was specifically premised upon the provisions of section 212(a)(20) of the Act.

The female respondent was also granted voluntary departure in lieu of deportation. The decision in their consolidated cases was issued December 19, 1974.

On April 21, 1976, the respondents filed a joint motion to reopen the deportation proceedings in order to apply for section 243(h) relief. They alleged that they would be persecuted for belonging to the Church of Christ if they returned to the Philippines. Their motion to reopen was denied by the immigration judge and we dismissed their appeal from that denial, on the ground that they had not made out a prima facie case of anticipated persecution.

Meanwhile, on January 26, 1976, the female respondent gave birth to a child in the United States. She now claims that this birth, plus an intervening decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, Persaud v. INS, 537 F.2d 776 (1976), entitle her to remain in the country as a lawful permanent resident.

Standing alone, the fact that she has an infant United States citizen child in no way confers immigration benefits upon her. The child would have to be 21 before it could petition for an immigrant visa in her behalf. Section 201(b) of the Act.¹

The female respondent is arguing that her immigration fraud, together with the fact that she has just had a child in the United States, entitles her to permanent resident status. That this claim can be made at all shows how apt Justice Rehnquist's remark was, when, quoting Macduff, he said of section 241(f)'s history: "Confusion now hath made his masterpiece." Reid v. INS, 420 U.S. 619, 628 (1975). Unfortunately, Justice Rehnquist's opinion for the court in Reid did not succeed in ending the confusion. See Persaud v. INS, supra; Escobar Ordonez v. INS, 526 F.2d 969 (5 Cir. 1976); Castro-Guerrero v. INS, 515 F.2d 615 (5 Cir. 1975); Cacho and Alvarenga de Paz v. INS, 547 F.2d 1057 (9 Cir. 1976); Guel-Perales v. INS, 519 F.2d 1372 (9 Cir. 1975); DeLeon v. INS, 547 F.2d 142 (2 Cir. 1976); Pereira-Barreira v. INS, 523 F.2d 503 (2 Cir. 1975); Matter of Montemayor, Interim Decision 2399 (BIA 1975).

There is nothing in the Third Circuit's decision in Persaud which provides support for the claim made here.

Section 241(f) provides, in pertinent part:

"The provisions of this section relating to the deportation of aliens within the United States on the ground that they were excludable at the time of entry as aliens who have sought to procure, or have procured visas or other documentation, or entry into the United States by fraud or misrepresentation shall not apply to an alien otherwise admissible at the time of entry who is the spouse, parent, or a child of a United States citizen" (Emphasis added.)

The court's decision in Persaud makes it crystal clear that the alien seeking section 241(f) relief must be "otherwise admissible." 537 F.2d at 778. Persaud seems to leave open the question whether the alien must be otherwise admissible at the time of entry as the statute says, or merely otherwise admissible at the time he or she applies for section 241(f) relief. (See opinion of Judge Stern, concurring.) The question does not arise here, since the female respondent has never been and is not now "otherwise admissible," being excludable because of the labor certification requirement of section 212(a)(14). See Cacho and Alvarenga de Paz v. INS, supra.

It is quite irrelevant that the Service did not link up its charge of being excludable at the time of entry, section 241(a)(1), with the substantive ground for exclusion provided by section 212(a)(14), the labor certification requirement.

In this motion to reopen in order to apply for section 241(f) relief, the burden is on the female respondent to make a prima facie showing that she is eligible for that relief. In order to be eligible, she must, at the very least, show that she is otherwise admissible to the United States now. She has made no attempt to show that she is exempt from, or has complied with, the labor certification requirement of section 212(a)(14).

Consequently, her motion to reopen will be denied.

ORDER: The motion to reopen is denied.

Chairman

8 U.S.C. 1182(a), (14), (19), (20)

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the following classes of aliens shall be ineligible to receive visas and shall be excluded from admission into the United States:

(14) Aliens seeking to enter the United States, for the purpose of performing skilled or unskilled labor, unless the Secretary of Labor has determined and certified to the Secretary of State and the Attorney General that (A) there are not sufficient workers who are able, willing, qualified (or equally qualified in the case of aliens who are members of the teaching profession or who have exceptional ability in the sciences or the arts), and available at the time of application for a visa and admission to the United States and at the place where the alien is to perform such skilled or unskilled labor, and (B) the employment of such aliens will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of the workers in the United States similarly employed. The exclusion of aliens under this paragraph shall apply to preference immigrant aliens described in section 203(a)(3) and (6) of this title, and to nonpreference immigrant aliens described in section 203(a)(8) of this title;

* * * * *

(19) Any alien who seeks to procure, or has to procure, or has procured a visa or other documentation, or seeks to enter the United States, by fraud, or by willfully misrepresenting a material fact;

(20) Except as otherwise specifically provided in this Act, any immigrant who at the time of application for admission is not in possession of a valid unexpired immigrant visa, reentry permit, border crossing identification card, or other valid entry document required by this Act, and a valid unexpired passport, or other suitable travel document, or document of identity and nationality, if such document is required under the regulations issued by the Attorney General pursuant to section 211(a);

* * * * *

8 U.S.C. 1251(a), (1), (2), (f)

(a) Any alien in the United States (including an alien crewman) shall, upon the order of the Attorney General, be deported who—

(1) at the time of entry was within one or more of the classes of aliens excludable by the law existing at the time of such entry;

(2) entered the United States without inspection or at any time or place other than as designated by the Attorney General or is in the United States in violation of this Act or in violation of any other law of the United States;

* * * * *

(f) The provisions of this section relating to the deportation of aliens within the United States on the ground that they were excludable at the time of entry as aliens who have sought to procure, or have procured visas or other documentation, or entry into the United States by fraud or misrepresentation shall not apply to an alien otherwise admissible at the time of entry who is the spouse, parent, or a child of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

Section 7 of the Act of 1957:

Section 7 of the 1957 Act provided that:

"The provisions of section 241 of the Immigration and Nationality Act relating to the deportation of aliens within the United States on the ground that they were excludable at the time of entry as (1) aliens who have sought to procure, or have procured visas or other documentation, or entry into the United States by fraud or misrepresentation, or (2) aliens who were not of the nationality specified in their visas, shall not apply to an alien otherwise admissible at the time of entry who (A) is the spouse, parent, or a child of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence; or (B) was admitted to, the United States between December 22, 1945, and November 1, 1954, both dates inclusive and misrepresented his nationality, place of birth, identity, or residence in applying for a visa: Provided, That such alien described in clause (B) shall establish to the satisfaction of the Attorney General that the misrepresentation was predicated upon the alien's fear of persecution because of race, religion, or political opinion if repatriated to his former home or residence, and was not committed for the purpose of evading the quota restrictions of the immigration laws or an investigation of the alien at the place of his former home, or residence, or elsewhere. After the effective date of this Act, any alien who is the spouse, parent, or child of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence and who is excludable because (1) he seeks, has sought to procure, or has procured, a visa or other documentation, or entry into the United States, by fraud or misrepresentation, or (2) he admits the commission of perjury in connection therewith, shall hereafter be granted a visa and admitted to the United States for permanent residence, if otherwise admissible, if the Attorney General in his discretion has consented to the alien's applying or reapplying for a visa and for admission to the United States."

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE

ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT

BRIEF FOR THE RESPONDENT IN OPPOSITION

OPINIONS BELOW

The judgment order of the court of appeals (Pet. App. 1a) and the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals (Pet. App. 2a-5a) are not reported.

JURISDICTION

The order of the court of appeals was entered on June 6, 1978. The petition for a writ of certiorari was filed on August 2, 1978. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

(1)

QUESTION PRESENTED

Whether petitioner Encarnation David is an alien who was "otherwise admissible" at the time of her entry into the United States by means of fraud and is therefore eligible for relief from deportation under Section 241(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. 1251(f).

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 212(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. 1182(a), provides in pertinent part:

Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, the following classes of aliens shall be ineligible to receive visas and shall be excluded from admission into the United States:

* * * *

(14) Aliens seeking to enter the United States, for the purpose of performing skilled or unskilled labor, unless the Secretary of Labor has determined and certified to the Secretary of State and the Attorney General that (A) there are not sufficient workers in the United States who are able, willing, qualified (or equally qualified in the case of aliens who are members of the teaching profession or who have exceptional ability in the sciences or the arts), and available at the time of application for a visa and admission to the United States and at the place where the alien is to perform such skilled or unskilled labor, and (B) the employment of such aliens will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of the workers in the United States similarly employed.

* * * *

(19) Any alien who seeks to procure, or has sought to procure, or has procured a visa or other documentation, or seeks to enter the United States, by fraud, or by willfully misrepresenting a material fact * * *.

Section 241 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1251, provides in pertinent part:

(a) Any alien in the United States (including an alien crewman) shall, upon the order of the Attorney General, be deported who—

(1) at the time of entry was within one or more of the classes of aliens excludable by the law existing at the time of such entry;

* * * *

(f) The provisions of this section relating to the deportation of aliens within the United States on the ground that they were excludable at the time of entry as aliens who have sought to procure, or have procured visas or other documentation, or entry into the United States by fraud or misrepresentation shall not apply to an alien otherwise admissible at the time of entry who is the spouse, parent, or a child of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence.

STATEMENT

Petitioners, husband and wife, are natives and citizens of the Philippines. On February 6, 1971, Mr. David entered the United States as a nonimmigrant visitor authorized to remain for 30 days (A.R. 38).¹ He failed to leave within the time prescribed and fraudulently altered his Form I-94 (Arrival-Departure Record) to show extensions of his authorized stay until March 1, 1975 (A.R. 23, 38).

Although petitioners have been married to each other since November 8, 1959, Mrs. David obtained false documents purporting to show that she was married to Alfred Donnelly, an American citizen. Donnelly was a fictitious person. By means of this fraud, Mrs. David entered the United States on August 23, 1973, as the spouse of an American citizen, leaving her and Mr. David's five minor children in the Philippines (A.R. 2, 23, 38).

At their joint deportation hearing in December 1974, both petitioners conceded that they were deportable (A.R. 31-32).² Petitioners' counsel also conceded that they were making no request for withholding of deportation on grounds of political asylum pursuant to Section 243(h) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. 1253(h) (A.R. 33). Petitioners agreed not to raise a claim to political asylum if they were granted the privilege of voluntary departure in lieu of deportation (A.R. 23-24, 28). The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) agreed, and petitioners were granted four months' voluntary departure time (ibid.).

² Mrs. David was charged with deportability under Section 241(a)(1) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1251(a)(1), in that, at the time of entry, she was within one or more classes of aliens excludable by the law, i.e., aliens who are immigrants not in possession of a valid immigrant visa (Section 212(a)(20), 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(20)) (A.R. 2). Deportability under Section 241(a)(1) could also have been predicated on the fact that she was excludable under Section 212(a)(14), 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14). See page 7 and n. 4, infra.

On April 15, 1975—four days before their voluntary departure period expired—petitioners, through different counsel, asked the District Director of INS for political asylum on the ground that they might be persecuted for their political and religious beliefs if they returned to the Philippines (A.R. 27). The District Director asked the Department of State for its opinion on the requests, as required by 8 C.F.R. 108.2; and on November 11, 1975, the Department of State informed the District Director that it did not believe petitioners would be subject to persecution in the Philippines (A.R. 21-24). On April 14, 1976, petitioners were informed that their request for political asylum was denied (A.R. 17-20). On April 21, 1976, petitioners moved to have their deportation proceedings reopened so that they could apply for withholding of deportation under Section 243(h) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1253(h), on the ground that they would be subject to persecution in the Philippines because of their religion (A.R. 15-16). On June 22, 1976, the immigration judge denied the motion to reopen, finding the claim of potential persecution to be without merit (A.R. 10). On August 31, 1976, the Board of Immigration Appeals dismissed petitioners' appeal (A.R. 8).

On September 21, 1976, Mrs. David made a new motion to reopen her deportation proceeding. This motion, which is the subject of the present litigation, sought relief from deportation under Section 241(f) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1251(f) (A.R. 6-7). In support of this motion, Mrs. David alleged that on January 26, 1976, she had given birth to a child who was a United States citizen by virtue of being born in this country. On September 29, 1977, the Board denied the new motion to reopen (Pet. App. 2a-5a). The Board held that Mrs. David was not entitled to relief under Section 241(f) because she was not "otherwise admissible" at the time of her fraudulent entry since she did not meet the labor certification requirement of Section 212(a)(14) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14). On June 6, 1978, the court of appeals by judgment order affirmed the Board's decision "for the reasons set forth in the opinion of the Board of Immigration Appeals" (Pet. App. 1a).³

³ The mandate of the court of appeals issued June 28, 1978. On July 26, 1978, petitioners' counsel was informed by the clerk of the court of appeals that their motion to recall the mandate of that court pending decision by this Court on their petition for a writ of certiorari was denied. Petitioners were scheduled for deportation from Newark, New Jersey, on July 31, 1978. Petitioners then sought a stay of their deportation in this Court. On August 7, 1978, Mr. Justice Brennan denied their stay application. Petitioners were again scheduled for deportation on August 16, but did not appear. On August 17,

ARGUMENT

Section 241(f) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. 1251(f), excuses an alien's fraud at the time of entry into the United States if the alien was "otherwise admissible at the time of entry" and is the spouse, parent, or child of a United States citizen or permanent resident alien. Petitioners contend that the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals denying Mrs. David relief under Section 241(f) because at the time of her entry she did not meet the labor certification requirement of Section 212(a)(14) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(14), erroneously interprets Section 241(f) and conflicts with this Court's decision in INS v. Errico, 385 U.S. 214 (1966). This claim is insubstantial and does not warrant review by this Court. (Mr. David does not contend that he is entitled to relief under Section 241(f); he urges only that if Mrs. David obtains permanent resident status, she could file a second preference visa petition in his behalf (see Pet. App. 3a).)

Despite Mrs. David's failure to satisfy the labor certification requirement of Section 212(a)(14),⁴ petithe District Director of the INS also denied an application for a stay. Both petitioners have now been deported from the United States. The case is not moot, however, since we are informed by the INS that it would permit petitioners to return to the United States if this Court were to conclude that Mrs. David is entitled to relief under Section 241(f).

⁴ Although petitioners emphasize (Pet. 5) that they have not been "permitted a full and formal hearing" on their request for relief under Section 241(f), they do not contend that Mrs. David was or is able to satisfy the labor certification requirements of Section 212(a)(14).

tioners contend (Pet. 6) that except for her fraud she was "otherwise admissible" at the time of her entry, within the meaning of Section 241(f), because that Section requires only that an alien meet "the physical, mental, and moral standards for admission to this country set out in 8 U.S.C. 1182," quoting Gonzalez de Moreno v. INS, 492 F.2d 532, 538 (5th Cir. 1974), and citing INS v. Errico, 385 U.S. 214 (1966).

This contention is without merit. In Reid v. INS, 420 U.S. 619, 630 (1975) (footnote omitted), this Court held that Congress, in enacting Section 241(f), * * * did not intend to arm the dishonest alien seeking admission to our country with a sword by which he could avoid the numerous substantive grounds for exclusion unrelated to fraud, which are set forth in Section 212(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Noting the confusion engendered by the "broad language in some portions of the Court's opinion in Errico" (420 U.S. at 628), the Court in Reid explained the limited nature of its holding in Errico. The Court concluded in Errico that Section 241(f) relief was available to an alien who was subject to deportation for fraudulent entry under Section 212(a) (19), even though the INS had formally charged him, not with fraud, but with failure to meet quota requirements under another section of the Act. The Court in Reid expressly concluded that Errico is inapposite when the INS has specified any ground of deportability under Section 212 that is unrelated to the alien's fraud under Section 212(a) (19):

In view of the language of § 241(f) and the cognate provisions of § 212(a) (19), we do not believe Errico's holding may properly be read to extend the waiver provisions of § 241(f) to any of the grounds of excludability specified in § 212 (a) other than subsection (19). This conclusion, by extending the waiver provision of § 241(f) not only to deportation based on excludability under § 212(a) (19), but to a claim of deportability based on fraudulent misrepresentation in order to satisfy the [documentary] requirements of § 211(a), gives due weight to the concern expressed in Errico that the provisions of § 241(f) were intended to apply to some misrepresentations that were material to the admissions procedure.

420 U.S. at 630.

Following the decision in Reid, every court that has considered the question has recognized that Section 241(f) relief is not available to an alien who was excludable at the time of entry for reasons unrelated to his fraud or misrepresentation. Cacho v. INS, 547 F.2d 1057, 1062 (9th Cir. 1976) (failure to comply with labor certification requirements under Section 212(a) (14)); Escobar Ordenez v. INS, 526 F.2d 969 (5th Cir. 1976); Guel-Perales v. INS, 519 F.2d 1372 (9th Cir. 1975). See also Castro-Guerrero v. INS, 515 F.2d 615 (5th Cir. 1975).

Petitioners rely on Gonzalez de Moreno v. INS, supra. But that case was decided prior to Reid, and it has not been followed in subsequent Fifth Circuit cases. See Escobar Ordonez v. INS, supra, 526 F.2d at 970-971, and Castro-Guerrero v. INS, supra, 515 F.2d at 616-618.

Petitioners also urge (Pet. 7) that the Third Circuit's decision in this case conflicts with the same circuit's earlier decision in Persaud v. INS, 537 F.2d 776 (1976). Persaud, however, addressed only the question whether Section 241(f) relief was available to an alien in possession of a fraudulent visa at the time of his admission if the INS charged deportability under Section 212(a)(20) of the Act (lack of a valid visa or other entry document) rather than under Section 212(a)(19) (procurement of a visa by fraud or misrepresentation). The court of appeals concluded (537 F.2d at 779):

[W]e believe that the essence of Reid and Errico is that § 241(f) will not be available when its application would permit an alien to avoid a basis for deportation which is separate, independent, and unrelated to the fraud. However, Reid does not hold that § 241(f) may be circumvented by the Service when the fraudulent acts alone form the basis for deportation.

As the Board of Immigration Appeals correctly concluded, by virtue of this Court's decision in Reid, Mrs. David is not entitled to relief under Section 241 (f) because she was ineligible for admission at the time of her entry for a reason unrelated to her fraud—namely, her failure to meet the labor certification requirement of Section 212(a)(14).

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.

Respectfully submitted.
